

Abstract: Who knows the biggest number? It seems like a children's game but big number hide amazing mathematics that are at the core of the theory of computation. In this talk we will find numbers bigger than anything a computer can count.

Short Bio: Eduardo Sáenz de Cabezón is professor of computer languages and systems at the University of La Rioja since 2001. He was the winner of Famelab Spain. He is a member and founder of a group of active scientists and researchers called Big Van Science, dedicated to scientific dissemination. He is the host of the Spanish late night show of science and humor Órbita Laika. He is the author of a YouTube channel called Derivando, in which he teaches and explains curiosities about the mathematical world, with more than one million subscribers <https://www.youtube.com/c/Derivando/>